

SheltAir Aviation Services

the premier FBO network

The SheltAir story

The core values, management expertise, and services provided by SheltAir Aviation Services go back to the mid-1960's when Gerald M. Holland, Owner and President of SheltAir Aviation Services, started Holland Builders Inc., a general aviation development and contracting company.

In 1988, the Fort Lauderdale and Daytona Beach Jet Centers were formed. Operating as both Fixed Base Operations (FBOs) and commercial ground handling/fueling companies, the Jet Centers quickly expanded past the aviation development realm of Holland Builders, Inc.

Our operation continued to expand, adding facilities and services throughout Florida and New York; the Jet Centers officially changed their name and branding to SheltAir Aviation Services, further differentiating ourselves in the aviation community.

The alliance of Holland Builders and SheltAir Aviation Services incorporates the successful combination of skills related to the development and management of aviation properties and operational services.

The fact that the entire process can be directed from one source beginning with the design and site selection of a facility, to the construction, financing, and property management, is a key component of our success.

Above all, we take pride in our talented, conscientious people who make SheltAir's commitment to excellence part of their work ethic, day in and day out. Their extensive training, dedication, and years of experience are what make the difference.
